"What is life, it's meaning and purpose? A conversation with an Orthodox Christian physicist."

By: Dr. Michael Pravica, Associate Professor of Physics, UNLV
Abstract:

"In this talk, we will discuss perspectives of life, it's meaning and purpose from the perspective of an Orthodox Christian physicist who views religion and science as complementary (and not contradictory) fields of human endeavor. Theories of how life came to be in this universe will be discussed as well as the potential for life far beyond our world. We will also discuss theories of the soul and how it gives us a purpose and meaning as a higher dimensional portal connecting us to God's infinite creativity. This talk is a continuation of my earlier talk on science and religion given here earlier."
